"But while we insist upon pure administration and the unselfish fidelity of public officers, we must visit deserved contempt upon those who profit by indiscriminate detraction of men in public life. If the people would be served faithfully they must show their esteem of faithful service. Otherwise the holding of public office becomes a school of cynicism. I am glad to testify to the many whom I have met in public life whose motives and whose actions conform to the best standards. Our public service is far more wholesome than many people think. If they are intent upon it and just in criticism the people can have the representation and the administration they desire.
